Register here: https://www.epa.gov/great-lakes-aocs Facebook: Are you familiar with Great Lakes Areas of Concern? An area of concern is an area where the ecosystem could be impaired due to serious pollution problems. In other words, it's a site that has experienced environmental degradation. There are currently 36 AOCs on EPA's AOC list, so maybe there's one in your area. Find out more here: https://www.epa.gov/great-lakes-aocs Areas of concern were first designated in 1987 when the United States and Canada established the U.S.-Canada Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement due to environmental degradation as a result of human activities.

Lake Appreciation Month: Lake Champlain Basin Program	Friday - July 31, 2020	Twitter: S/O to our partner, @LakeChamplainBasin Program, for preventing the highly invasive aquatic plant hydrilla from invading the lake at www.lcbp.org/2019/10/lake-champlain-steward-intercepts-hydrilla/ #HappyLakeAppreciationMonth! Facebook: Shout out to our partner, Lake Champlain Basin Program, for the work they're doing to protect the lake. Over the past year, the program has been working to prevent the highly invasive aquatic plant hydrilla from invading the lake. Hydrilla is known to displace native plants, clog waterways, and interfere with boating, fishing, and swimming. It's very hard to control, which is why interception is essential. Learn more about how Lake Champlain Basin Program is preventing the aquatic plant from invading the lake at www.lcbp.org/2019/10/lake-champlain-steward-intercepts-hydrilla/ #HappyLakeAppreciationMonth!
